IN COURT YESTERDAY

The Shortest Docket Recorded During the Present Week in the Police Court.

A JUVENILE THIEF SENT ON TO COURT

Paul Rossano Leads Officers to the Watch He Stole and Tells the Whereabouts of the Chain-Character Granted-Charged With Theft-Deeds Recorded-Marrriage Licenses

The Police Court dock yesterday was the smallest of the week.

CHARGED WITH THEFT.

A colored man named Willie Reed was arraigned in the Police Court yesterday, charged with stealing a long list of clothing from Mary Harris, a colored woman with whom he had been living for five years, at No. 17 Chesapeake street. Attorney Julius T. Saunders appeared for Reed and W. H. Land for the woman. From the array of witnesses produced by Mary to testify in her behalf, among whom were Officers Ludy and Manning, it looked as if there would be sufficient evidence to almost hang Reed himself, but after his attorney was through sifting out the testimony of Mary's witnesses it was found that she had no case under the law against the accused. Her attorney then begged the court to continue the case until Saturday for a material witness, who came out of the city. Attorney Saunders objected to the continuance, but his Honor thought the witness material and continued it until Saturday next.

ROSSANO IN COURT.

It will be remembered that a full account of the young 11-year-old white boy, Poly Rossano, and his thefts, among which was a valuable gold watch stolen from the residence of Mr. Henry Reardon, of the city, and sold to a man near Suffolk, were published in full in The Virginian several days ago. After the boy's arrest and his confession respecting the disposition of the watch, Detective Russell and Poly were sent up to Suffolk to meet Constable John S. Branch to identify and secure the watch or arrest him. Constable Branch yesterday produced the watch in court, and told an interesting and thrilling account of their interview with Jones. The latter is said to be a desperate character, who has killed a man, and goes by the unsavory appellation of Henry Holl Jones, and lives at the further end of one of those dismal necks of land in Isle of Wight county, known as Terrapin Neck. The officers and Poly had a dreary ride through the rain and mud of twenty-nine miles to the house of the man who had sworn that he would not give the watch alive. The officers know that they were on a dangerous mission and were watching every pole and on their guard. On arriving at the house they were met at the door by a grown up son of Jones, who told them that his father was in and asked them in the house. On entering the room they found Jones sitting by the fire surrounded by a well-chosen arsenal, there being no less than five revolvers and guns within reach of his hands. On learning the mission of the officers he got very hot, and swore in no mild terms that he would go to a warmer climate than this before he would give up the watch. The officers felt that it was no time to weaken, on then, and they reminded him that they had the drop on him and that he would do one of three things—give up the watch without pay, go with them alive, or go with them dead. Jones cursed another volume of oaths, but, seeing that the officers meant business, turned over the watch and the trio—Branch, Russell and Poly—left for this city, but neither of the officers breathed freely until they were out of gun shot of the man who has assaulted many and killed at least one, and who escaped the penalty of the law through legal technicalities. Mr. Reardon identified the watch as his. Poly was sent on to the grand jury.

John Martin was appointed a committee for Esther Northington (insane) under bond of $100. L. N. Mason, surety.
The trial of William Wright for the murder of Tom Briggs in King's lane, in February, with a shovel, is set in the Corporation Court for Monday next. Mr. Julius T. Saunders will defend the prisoner and Mr. John G. Tilton will assist the Commonwealth's Attorney Baum in the prosecution.

Samples and bids for uniforms were received from Messrs. Glendahl, V. Car and Gilbert, and Mr. J. C. Carroll, the latter being the lowest bidder, the contract was awarded to him at the following prices, provided he can make satisfactory terms with the Board: Suit for Chief, $16.50; Assistant Chief, $15.25; patrolman, $13.75. But in the event satisfactory terms cannot be made with Mr. Carroll, the contract is to be awarded to the next lowest bidder. The meeting then adjourned until Thursday next at 4:30 o'clock.

Attention is called to the meeting at Memorial Christian Temple to-day especially for the young—their consecration to Christian life. The good work yet to be done.

The morning and afternoon services yesterday were well attended and encouraging to the meeting under auspices of McKendree and Park Avenue Presbyterian Churches. He the one for all classes of sinners "to follow in the way," the moral, refined, working and the drunkard in the gutter, in God's remedy for salvation there is no difference. All must accept Jesus or perish. Many persons have turned to a better life and made profession of faith in Christ. Services to-day as usual and Cottage prayer meetings at follows: At Messrs. Ashlin, Park Avenue; Hankenship, Charles street; Dawson, near Walton Chapel; Hall, Windsor avenue; McCloud, Granville; Keeling, Wiloughby; Satterthite, Charles street; Hodges, Hughes street, and Dr. Webster's, Park avenue, all at 10 a. m.

Opening the Stomach Gates.

Relieves a dam of a superabundance of water. The bowels are a kind of dam, and superfluities which would otherwise flood and damage it. Constipation obstructs this avenue of escape. Hostetler's Stomach Bitters opens it and gradually, but completely, relieves it. Not like a violent purgative, grips, vomits and drenches the bowels, and leaves the system weak and feeble. Hostetler's Stomach Bitters, on the contrary, it invigorates and regulates at the same time that it relieves them. It also strengthens and imparts activity to the stomach, liver and kidneys, counteracts a tendency to chills and fever, bilious remittent, dumb ague and acute catarrh. It has no peer among modern remedies. Persons conversant with the cause of the debility or infirmity of age find it highly beneficial.

SENATOR HILL ON CUBA

newspaper correspondents, and their reports gave an accurate account of the condition of affairs in the island. He was willing to stand by what these correspondents said. It had been said by some that the administration was being embarrassed by these resolutions. "If the administration thought these resolutions were embarrassing to it, some one here would have had knowledge of that fact. I cannot believe the administration would keep its own counsel so close that no one would know what it desired."

In response to a query from Mr. Hill, he said he did not believe a single law would be changed by the passage of a concurrent resolution, which did not receive the signature of the President. For that reason he believed the resolutions in a concurrent form were proper and that it was in that light that he proposed to discuss them.

In 1836, Mr. Clay did not think a resolution expressing the opinion of Congress was Plekwickian. Had the resolutions been made joint the argument would have been made that they interfered with the rights of the executive.

Mr. Hill said he was for the concurrent resolutions because they only expressed the opinion of Congress and were respectful, not only to our own President, but to the Government of Spain. He believed the President would carefully consider the resolutions. They would have a moral effect throughout the country and the world. When Jackson was President Congress adopted concurrent resolutions expressing its opinion, not upon the question of independence, but upon the greater question of the independence of a country. Such resolutions were the only safe ones; thus far such Congress go, and no further.

In 1861 several foreign governments properly recognized the belligerency of the Southern Confederacy, but not upon their independence. The United States itself recognized them as belligerents by exchanging prisoners, recognizing flags of truce. The interests of humanity demanded that the Cubans should be treated as insurgents; their executions must be stopped; they must be treated as prisoners of war. Their recognition could not be offensive to Spain and it should be granted by this Government in the interest of humanity and in accordance with the customs of all civilized nations.

In conclusion, he said: "Mr. President—While the true policy of this Government is that of peace—not peace at any price, but peace with honor—and while our general policy is that of non-intervention in the affairs of other countries, yet let me repeat what has been said here stated here and elsewhere, that, as one of the free States among nations, one of the great republics, it is impossible that our principles, our sentiments and our example should not produce effect upon the opinions and hopes of society throughout the civilized world, and if other peoples, no matter in what quarter of the globe, whether our own shores or in the distant waters of the Pacific, imbued with the same spirit of liberty, catching the inspiration of our success, desire to found a republic and throw off the shackles of a monarchy, if we cannot consistently give them a helping hand at the best we should not retard them, we should not crush them; we should not frown upon them; we should not stand up so straight as to lean over backward against them in the exercise of a strict and cold neutrality, but on the contrary we should encourage and cheer them in all the ways and methods permissible under the rules of international law. In short, such efforts on our part, as well as our sympathy, should be extended to every people struggling to be free from the burdens, oppressions and wrongs of monarchical government."

"We cannot ignore the fact that we set them their example. We are responsible for the lessons we have taught the world. We established the doctrine that the right of revolution for it exists. Who so craven as now wants to abandon it?"

"What is the situation? The people of Cuba have founded a republic and are seeking to maintain it. They are resisting the right of taxation without representation. They want some voice in their own government. They are subject to longer being governed by a distant power that does not in fact govern, but oppresses and plunders them. It is the old story of our American revolution over again. There were torres then, as there are torres now, whose sympathies are with aristocratic and monarchical governments. They will be crushed now, as they were then, by the force of the righteous and intelligent public sentiment of a free people, determined to maintain free institutions for liberty's sake alone. We cannot shut our eyes to the fact that there exists what Mr. Seward called 'an irrepressible conflict' between the forces of Republicanism on the one hand and the forces of monarchy on the other. And between a despotic and a constitutional government; between those who believe in the divine right of Kings to rule and those who believe that society itself shall have a substantial part in its own government."

"The people of the United States had chosen their side of the great conflict constantly being waged. The result of the war was a victory for the side of the progress of civilization. Cuba wanted to join the procession of republics and enjoy liberty and freedom. 'God grant that she succeed,' said Mr. Hill, 'but whether she secure it or not, let us do our duty.'"

In conclusion Mr. Hill quoted the words of Daniel Webster in 1828, when he made his great speech in favor of the recognition of Greek independence.

At 2 o'clock unfinished business was laid before the Senate, and Mr. Pritchard took the floor in support of the right of Henry Dupont, as a Senator from Delaware. He yielded, however, to Mr. Sherman, who desired to speak on the Cuban resolutions.

Referring to the failure to make the resolutions joint, Mr. Sherman said the committee did not deem this wise. There was no politics in the matter. The committee sought simply to do what was best in the premises.

Had the resolutions been joint the President would have been compelled at a critical stage of the war in Cuba to either approve or disapprove them within ten days. All that was wanted was an expression of the opinion of Congress. However they may differ from the Pres-
